'ORDINARY LIVES: WOMEN OF THE MIDDLE EAST' SANA GALLERY

The focus of this body of work is on women and children in the Middle East, contrasting the image of the region in the media (bombings, terrorism, kidnappings) with the fact that the large majority of the inhabitants are ordinary people going on with their everyday lives. The artist, Lebanese-American Rania Matar, explores the universality and diversity of being human, of being a mother, a child or a young woman without regard to social background, religion, or nationality, in region torn by strife. She portrays her subjects as the individuals they are, focused on the everyday and determined to live their ordinary lives in a region which is anything but ordinary.
